Written September 10th, 1874, at Long s Drug Store, Bryan, Williams Country, Ohio.) Vandini he galloped in haughty pride, On the back of his coal black steed, did ride, When a Florentine maid beyond compare, With piercing black eyes, and bright auburn hair, Appeared in his path, with a basket of roses; He reigned up his charger, flew to her side, To the maid with passionate ardor cried, Thy form is matchless, to love thee I dare: Be constant ever, she said, or beware. The thought in my brain to me discloses, That he who steals and withers my posies, Must beware of the Thorn hid neath my roses. Oh! there was wild joy in that maiden s heart; The Moon shone brightly; twas hard to part. Vandini had sought, and obtained the pearls, That were hidden beneath her clustering curls, He sought for and found the Florentine s Rose; About the Publisher Forgiven Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and...
