The death of George Frisbie Hoar, which occurred at his home in Worcester on Friday, the thirtieth day of September, 1904, has caused sadness in the Commonwealth and nation, but in this the city of his residence, it brings a peculiar and personal grief to all her citizens. For more than fifty years he had lived in Worcester and rendered her name conspicuous and honorable by the preeminence which he attained. It was here that he began the practice of his chosen profession and rose by the fidelity, industry, brilliancy, breadth of vision, soundness of judgment, and absolute integrity which characterized his every act and which were a part of the mental and moral fibre of the man, to be, by common consent, a lawyer without an equal at the bar of this county, in learning, capacity and wisdom. The only municipal office which he ever held was that of City Solicitor, and he often served...
